Hi Professor!

I hope this isn't a weird email, but I wanted to thank you for facilitating not only an incredibly informative discussion today, but also a space where these discussions can take place. Before my major change, I have been discouraged by an acquaintance outside of the classroom from speaking out on issues regarding social justice in Literature courses, especially in reference to my identity. This is obviously bull. While I am relatively new to the major, I'm currently in my third year and have taken a fair share of humanities courses-- this is one of two classes I have taken where I've felt rewarded by the professor for having these kinds of discussions (the other being, ironically, Teaching Multicultural Education).

I hope my silence today hasn't been taken as apathy. I plan to participate in following discussions. Thank you again, and have a safe weekend!

Your student,
